

SMME Feature:

Thabang Patrick Khisane crafts the coolest toys ever

In the remote village of Ganyesa, one would find Thabang Patrick Khisane and his magical hand-made toys.

Thabang is an SMME who works from his RDP house in Ganyesa. Thabang loves working with his hands and it shows if one admires all his magical and unique creations. He focuses mainly on cars and trucks with a clever dual purpose – having Bluetooth speakers, USB ports and solar panels added, all for the purpose of playing music.

These clever gadgets are such a unique invention, combining a rural South African gem in the form of the “draad kar” with a high tech and popular Bluetooth speaker. They are perfectly suited as corporate gifts for companies seeking something truly unique yet quintessential South African.

Apart from these clever inventions, Thabang also manufactures outdoor furniture pieces made from recycled materials such as vehicle tyres and rubber.

Thabang has also taken it upon himself to mentor six other people for them to also make a living.

Thabang, in turn, is mentored by Samuel Gomolemo who works for the Kagisano-Molopo Municipality, assisting Thabang to have his ideas patented.

For orders or more info contact:

- Thabang Patrick Khisane 076 305 7444
- Samuel Gomolemo (mentor) 064 754 5517

For more information on this article, contact:

Annemarie Marx: Communication Specialist, NWDC

+27 14 594 2570